

A Serenji Activation Key does not persist and has to be re-entered each time

04/25/2024 22:59:49

FAQ Article Print

Category:	Products::Serenji	Votes:	0
State:	public (all)	Result:	0.0 %
		Last update:	13:15:15 - 12/04/2013

Symptom (public)

You have received a Serenji Activation Key and entered it, but next time you start Serenji you are told you need to license the product.

Problem (public)

Serenji needs administrator privileges when performing its licensing operations.

Solution (public)

Close down any existing Serenji. Close down Serenji Sentry (the blue GJ icon) from the System Tray in the bottom right corner, by right-clicking on it and choosing "Exit". Find Serenji on your Start button's menu or equivalent, right-click on Serenji and choose "Run as administrator". Enter the Activation Key in Help\Register. OK the dialog. Close Serenji down, and also close down Serenji Sentry again. Launch Serenji normally (i.e. not using "Run as administrator"). Go to Help\Register and confirm that the Activation Key is still present there. If it isn't, email support@georgejames.com for advice. Assuming it is, you should be all set to use Serenji.